

Science Manager

The Faculty of Medicine of the University of Porto, Portugal, is recruiting a science manager to undertake surveillance of research and postgraduate activities, implement excellence-promoting measures, mediate international networking of research and education programs and coordinate the external evaluation processes.

We are seeking someone enthusiastic about science, with experience in heading scientific projects and promoting scientific education at the academic and general community levels.

Applicants must have a PhD degree and demonstrate scientific, administrative and communication skills.

The Faculty of Medicine of the University of Porto is an internationally recognized institution for biology and health research, which occupies a top position in health science in Portugal, leading basic and clinical research projects in multiple fields, and offering several high quality graduate programs.

Applicants must send a brief account on their strategic plan to accomplish the assignment, together with a curriculum vitae and the names of three references, to fmup@med.up.pt.

Deadline for submission of applications is 22nd October 2010.